September 23, First Day of Fall

For weeks, summer has slowly been slipping away. The days are getting shorter, the nights longer, and the first days of cool, crisp weather roll in. For many, it's the best time of year: On September 23, the Fall Equinox for 2019 has arrived.

The season may be dominated these days by pumpkin-spiced everything, but the roots of the Fall Equinox go much further back than Starbucks. For thousands of years, the Fall Equinox has been celebrated as a time when the harvest comes to an end, when the fruits of a year's worth of work become available, and when everyone must get ready for the coming winter. The period was always associated with a time for parties and gathering with friends and family, which explains why there is such a strong autumnal spirit to this day. So head outside or huddle up inside and appreciate the changing of the seasons!

National Assisted Living Week – Sep 8 -14

Many of us know someone who has either worked or resided in an assisted living environment. Assisted living facilities provide thorough care and a sense of community for older adults and individuals living with disabilities. Celebrating National Assisted Living Week gives us a chance to recognize all of the staff, volunteers, and communities that play a vital role in making these facilities a success. So get ready, September 8-14 is a week to point out the amazing things that go on within the world of assisted living.
